It gives me immense pleasure to welcome our readers to another issue of the Journal of Clinical Prosthodontics and Implantology (J-CPI). As we continue our journey of promoting excellence in prosthodontic and implantological research, this issue marks an important phase in the evolution of our journal.

One of the significant developments in recent times has been our transition to a new digital publishing portal. The new platform, available at j-cpi.org, has been introduced to streamline manuscript submission, peer review, editorial processing, communication with authors and reviewers, and publication workflows. This transition represents an important step towards making the journal more accessible, efficient and aligned with contemporary standards of scientific publishing. We sincerely regret any inconvenience that authors and reviewers may have experienced during this period of transition and appreciate their patience and understanding.

Our Journey Towards Indexing

A major priority for the journal is to strengthen its academic standing and work towards inclusion in reputed national and international indexing and abstracting databases. Considerable efforts are being undertaken to meet the required standards, including strengthening the editorial and reviewer panels, enhancing the quality and rigor of peer review, improving publication ethics and editorial policies, maintaining regularity and timeliness of publication, strengthening digital visibility, and ensuring adherence to established standards of scholarly publishing.

Indexing is not merely a destination; it is a reflection of sustained commitment to quality, consistency, transparency and academic integrity. We are therefore working systematically to fulfil the requirements of relevant indexing agencies. We recognize that this is a continuous process, and every manuscript published in J-CPI contributes to building the academic credibility and reputation of the journal.

Gratitude to Our Academic Community

The progress of any scholarly journal is a collective achievement. I would like to place on record my sincere appreciation to our Editorial Board members and the entire editorial team for their dedicated efforts in managing manuscripts, maintaining editorial standards and supporting the ongoing development of the journal.

I extend my heartfelt thanks to our reviewers, whose expertise, critical assessment and constructive suggestions are fundamental to maintaining the scientific quality of J-CPI. Peer review is often a demanding and largely voluntary academic responsibility, and we deeply value the time and knowledge contributed by every reviewer.

Our sincere gratitude also goes to our authors. By choosing J-CPI as a platform for sharing their research, clinical experiences, innovations and scholarly perspectives, our authors are helping the journal grow. We encourage researchers, academicians and clinicians to continue submitting high-quality original research, systematic and narrative reviews, clinical reports and other scholarly contributions relevant to prosthodontics and implantology.

Support of the Indian Prosthodontic Society

The growth of J-CPI would not be possible without the encouragement and institutional support extended by the Indian Prosthodontic Society (IPS) Head Office and the Tamil Nadu State Branch of the Indian Prosthodontic Society. We gratefully acknowledge their continued encouragement and confidence in the journal.

The association of the journal with the professional prosthodontic community provides us with an important responsibility—to create a credible platform that reflects the advancement of prosthodontics and implantology while encouraging young researchers and clinicians to contribute to scientific literature.

Looking Ahead

As we embark on this new phase, our vision is clear: to establish J-CPI as a respected, credible and internationally visible platform for scientific communication in prosthodontics and implantology.

We invite our readers, authors, reviewers and academic colleagues to be active partners in this journey. We welcome constructive suggestions that can help us improve the journal further. With collective commitment, academic integrity and sustained effort, we are confident that J-CPI will continue to grow from strength to strength.

On behalf of the editorial team, I thank every individual and institution that has contributed to the progress of the journal. The transition to our new portal and our ongoing efforts towards indexing represent not merely administrative milestones, but the beginning of a renewed commitment to quality, visibility and excellence in scientific publishing.

I look forward to your continued support and valuable contributions.
